Joint venture on Naia 3 proposed

By Michael Lim Ubac

ADMINISTRATION lawmakers yesterday suggested to Malacañang to explore the viability of a joint venture agreement with the Philippine International Air Terminals Co. (Piatco) to operate Terminal 3 of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

Surigao del Sur Rep. Prospero Pichay Jr., vice chair of the Commission on Appointments, and Manila Rep. Ernesto "Bansai" Nieva, chair of the House committee on people's participation, said the airport facility had been a "white elephant" for quite some time now.

"Government certainly does not want it to become a monument of waste and lost opportunities," said Pichay who called on the government to finally comply with the Supreme Court ruling Tuesday which allowed government to take legal possession of Terminal 3 once it had paid the minimum P3 billion to Piatco.

World class

"The government stands to lose nothing in a joint venture because it will finally be able to operate a world class terminal while not immediately shelling out the P3 billion initial compensation to Piatco. It will also expedite the opening of the world class terminal early next year," said Pichay.

He said a joint venture would also be "advantageous" to Piatco because it would continue to be a stakeholder of Naia 3 until the government was able to fully comply with the compensation.

Nieva, for his part, supported Pichay's proposal for government to strike a most reasonable compromise agreement with Piatco to allow the Terminal 3 opening early next year.

"While we support an opening of Terminal 3 at the soonest possible time, this must be done without the government disregarding its obligations to Piatco as determined by our Supreme Court. The court's decision provided the legal basis for government possession of Naia Terminal 3. Government should take this opportunity to immediately negotiate with Piatco on the payment scheme," said Nieva.

Just and prompt

Pichay said Solicitor General Alfredo Benipayo should not stand in the way of a "just and prompt" resolution of the controversial project.

While Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita said Wednesday that "our policy group might opt to pay the (amount) immediately, since the money is already there," Benipayo warned that the Arroyo administration could lose heavily if it paid up before taking over the terminal.

Pichay urged the government to start negotiating with Piatco to come up with a "win-win" agreement for Terminal 3 operations.

NBI men pay tribute to Wycoco

By Tina G. Santos

WHILE SOME EMPLOYEES HELD a Christmas party elsewhere, means of grief rang out as the chestnut-colored casket bearing the remains of Director Reynaldo Wycoco arrived at the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) office yesterday.

Most employees took a time off from their work and lined up at the NBI grounds to welcome their boss, whose remains arrived at the bureau around 10:30 a.m. Officials, meanwhile, wore black armbands as a sign of their mourning.

They also took turns in holding vigil at the late director's wake.

Wycoco, a former police general and a graduate of the Philippine Military Academy (PMA), looked very much a gentleman in his military uniform. Whatna from relatives and different government offices overflowed the NBI gymnasium.

"He was self-spoiler, he never got angry. He left a legacy of good leadership," said Romaldo Aza, chief of the bureau's Anti-Human Trafficking Division.

Most of the employees said the late director was very supportive of measures initiated for their welfare.

"He was a good boss, we'll surely miss him," they said.

A military burial at the Libingan ng mga Bayani will be accorded to Wycoco following a Mass tomorrow morning.

the Harvard University graduates offered sociological services for the late director. Another service is expected this afternoon by NBI officials and employees.

Wycoco's death came 26 days after he suffered a massive stroke and slipped into a deep coma.

He joined the NBI on Jan. 23, 2001 and was credited with several improvements in the bureau including the transfer of NBI clearance facilities to its new location in Carriedo, as well as innovations in the clearance system like the establishment of clearance renewal kiosks and the clearance-on-wheels project.

Prior to his appointment as bureau director, Wycoco had served as the Philippine National Police's second in command as deputy director general—the military's equivalent to three-star general.

After his graduation from the military in 1968, Wycoco was designated as PNP Regional Director for Region I, Director for Police Community Relations, Defense Attache in the United Kingdom, Armed Forces of the Philippines Command and General Staff College instructor and AFP and PNP spokesperson.

THE LAWYERS OF two of six American soldiers accused of raping a Filipina have questioned the inclusion of new evidence in the woman's final arguments, urging prosecutors in Olongapo City not to consider these in resolving the case.

In a manifestation filed on Wednesday, the lawyers of Corporal Corey Burris and Lance Corporal Albert Lara cited six "new factual matters" in the woman's Dec. 19 memorandum and which were not in her Nov. 2 sworn affidavit.

These included the mention of the woman as being a graduate of management accounting at the Ateneo de Davao University, the invitation extended to her and her sibling by United States serviceman Carlos Ocasio to the Subic Bay Freeport, and the mention of her drinking "alcoholic drinks."

'Forced to join'

The manifestation also cited accounts of what a US serviceman, identified as "Gerald" or "Genard," did to the woman while at the dance floor of the Neptune Bar and Restaurant, and the woman's asking for an identification card from that man.

The woman said it was at Neptune Bar where she was forced to join the soldiers in their van that was driven by Filipino Timoteo Soriano Jr.

Lawyers Jose Justiniano, Emmanuel Peña Jr., Aris Gulapa and Carlito Zaragoza, who are representing Burris and Lara, said four more new allegations were included in the woman's arguments. The lawyers, however, did not elaborate on these allegations.

They also questioned the use of the US Naval Criminal Investigative Service report on its interrogation of Lance Corporal Daniel Smith, the serviceman identified to have raped the 22-year-old woman.

'Inadmissible'

The NCIS report, they said, was not part of the case's record because it was not submitted to Prosecutor Prudencio Jalandoni.

Jalandoni earlier said he received the report in the third week of November and turned this over to Chief State Prosecutor Jovencito Zuño.

Justiniano clarified they were not asking Jalandoni to reject the entire memorandum of the woman.

Citing the rules of court on evidence, the lawyers told Jalandoni that the new matters were "inadmissible."

Sought for reactions, lawyer Minerva Ambrosio, one of the woman's lead counsels, said: "It's their right [to file a manifestation]. But everything is now the call of Prosecutor Jalandoni."

Hong Kong defeated on political reforms

HONG KONG—THE HONG KONG GOVERNMENT Wednesday suffered defeat of its proposals for limited political reform amid a bitter row over the slow pace of democratic change in the Chinese territory.

Prodemocracy legislators, who said the reforms did not go far enough, rejected recommendations to expand the committee which elects the chief executive and to enlarge the legislature.

The government had proposed doubling the size of the election committee, currently dominated by Beijing-backed elites, to 1,600. It had also recommended enlarging the half-elected, half-appointed legislature from 60 to 70 seats.

Both proposals had 34 votes in favor, 24 against and one abstention. Constitutional changes need the support of two-thirds of the chamber, or 40 members.

Chief executive Donald Tsang, who had lobbied hard for the reforms, called the result "regrettable" and "disappointing."

"For the past few months, I had hoped for a Christmas present from the Legislative Council and unfortunately it hasn't come true," he said.

"We have lost an opportunity to take a significant step towards democracy."

Tsang said the government would accept the legislature's decision.

"But democratic development doesn't stop here. I have the responsibility to lead Hong Kong to reach the ultimate goal of achieving universal suffrage," he said.

"I just understand how formidable this task is."

The two-sided bill, put forth by Beijing-appointed Tsang, was aimed at quelling a clamor for full democracy that has steadily grown since Hong Kong reverted to Chinese rule in 1997.

Democrats, who want Tsang to provide a concrete timetable for reform, said the proposals would have failed to achieve the post-colonial constitution's goal of allowing citizens to elect their leaders.

"I think we need a country that respects the aspirations of the people. I'm proud of being a Chinese if China is strong, not only in terms of its military strength and its economy but rather a respect for human rights and the wishes of the people," Democratic Party chair Li Wing-tat said in the chamber after the vote.

Ma Lik, chair of the progovernment Democratic Alliance for the Betterment of Hong Kong, regretted the outcome.

"I found (the result) was very regrettable. If you want democracy you should have supported the motion earlier," he said.

Rejection of the bill is an embarrassment for Tsang, who took over as chief executive in June, and a major victory for the democrats.

Tens of thousands of demonstrators took to the streets earlier this month to demand the universal suffrage promised to them eight years ago, in the biggest display of public anger since Tsang took office in June.

Prodemocracy legislators have traveled to the United States and Europe to drum up support, while Tsang had made a last-ditch effort on Monday to defuse the crisis.

As a sop to the democrats Tsang had proposed to abolish appointed seats on district councils, the lowest rung of government, in a move seen as significant due to the government's dependence on the appointees for support.

Tsang made an appeal for support in a rare television speech last month, warning that rejection of the electoral reform package would only make it more difficult for Hong Kong to achieve universal suffrage.

The chief executive offered the modest reform proposals after Beijing last year ruled out a swift transition to full democracy.

The ruling Chinese Communist Party fears political upheaval may destabilize the economy of its richest city and spark calls for reform on the mainland.

'Lumad' folk spend holidays in Davao

DAVAO CITY—HUNDREDS OF Lumad (members of the indigenous communities) have descended to the city since November.

But unlike in previous years when many Lumads have maintained an indifferent attitude towards the holiday season, their experience this year is far more pleasant.

The reason: Mayor Rodrigo

HUNDREDS of the Mandaya, a specific tribal group living in the hinterlands of Davao province, descended to Davao City to celebrate Christmas here at their unique song and dance in a stage in gay building (photos).

(Illustration by JIMMY L. LACOR)

Davao had asked them to raise and share the spirit of Christmas with city residents.

In early in the first week of November, members of the Mandaya communities from the hinterlands of the city and from as far as Butuan became a regular sight in the city's streets, adding gifts, small clothing and money.

Davao said during his December TV program over 300-400 Lumads descended to the city and spent the holidays in this city.

"Transportation was made available just for them so they could make it to the city," he said.

Unlike in the past when the Lumads spent their nights under the stars of the weather, Davao said he made sure that this year, they had at least decent places to stay.

"Their place to stay and provision and other needs are taken care of," Davao said. They were also given health and medical services. This was the city's way of showing appreciation and care to the Lumads, who are descendants of the first settlers of Mindanao, he said.

"We feel the joy of giving," said Rodrigo 5-6. Chair Edgar Reyes, who oversees the work of the "Lumads" assigned in his village.

Davao said each from the gifts they would receive, each family would also be given P2,000 in cash.

The money would be drawn from the city's fund.

"I came here with my daughter and husband to ask gifts because this is the only time we at least can have something nice and have clothes which we don't have inside in our house," said Francisco Indiano, an Mandaya.

Reyes said her family took temporary shelter at a government in January 5-6 in Butuan has done so.

"Even if this shelter does not look a bit like home, there is smile among the children."

"At home we only eat rice and kumam (pork potage), but here, we could at least enjoy rice and salad," Reyes said.

Francisco Indiano, 30, also an Mandaya, said although Christmas is not part of their culture, they have gone out of their way to join the celebration. Saturday, Dec 3, Davao, PHILIPPINE DAILY INQUIRER

Leyte gov't employees get incentive bonuses

By Joy A. Solis
PH/Manila Bureau

TAGBIRAN CITY—THE LEYTE provincial government is set to release this week around P20 million to be given to over 2,000 employees as their productivity incentive bonus for 2010.

Each of the employees will get at least P2,000 to P20,000, depending on the performance rating they received this year, according to provincial administrator Marissa Tamayo.

In top of the 2010 incentive bonus, the 2,134 provincial government employees will also receive P2,000 bonus, representing their merit-based incentive bonus for 2009.

For unlike the last year bonus scheme adopted in 2009, the amount to be received by the employees this year would be based on the performance rating survey conducted by Gov. Antonio Brillantes early this year.

Davao said that since this incentive rating would mean that no employees could receive P2,000 as his productivity bonus, this bonus while those who performed very satisfactorily could receive as high as P20,000.

Under the rating scale adopted by the provincial government, employees who got less than 7.5 as performance rating will receive P2,000; a rating of 7.5 to 8.49 is equivalent to a bonus of P6,000; and 8.5 - 96,000. Those who receive performance ratings above 8.5 will be richer by P30,000.

All casual employees who started working at the provincial government after June 30 this year or after the survey was completed would receive P20,000 as their productivity incentive bonus.

Davao said those who received less than 7.5 performance rating were employees representing just about six percent of the Capital's 2,134 workforce. This means that majority of the employees will reach up to P20,000 bonus.

The bonus was expected to be released before ending 2011.

He said among the factors considered in the performance rating survey were the employees' attendance, work ethics or conduct and compliance to the orders issued by the governing like issuing proper office orders and of his D.

Couple feeds Laguna poor every Christmas Day

CHICAGO CITY—A CHICAGO HOME, HOME reported awareness has been leading the "parents of the poor" families in Chicago to open the doors to the city.

The couple started distributing food from his truck during a language in Columbia City area in 1995.

The husband-and-wife team expanded its Christmas tree house going to Victoria, B.C., and this year, it is sending food items to the poorest kids in Frenchtown.

The couple concludes with prints and notes in preparing the gift packages.

They choose the best size grains, which they give away together with spaghetti, potato food and other food items needed by some poor families in suburban Chittagong.

The couple prepared at least 200-300 bags of food items.

The lawyer-husband need is satisfied by several points as means to insolvency action can be discontinued against the husband because of his own free will.

Christ loves the most neglected, even even if he/she is not Catholic. Let us find those who are very hungry," he said.

The above translations must have been really aware of Omer's words in the Scripture that says: "Whenever you did this to one of the least, if these my brothers, you did it to me" (Mt. 25:40).

He said it makes them happy to be a part of alleviating the hunger of so many families even if only for a day.

The said, they know what it feels to suffer and be hungry when they themselves became the victims in 1974.

The husband, a lawyer, said they were doing this without failure to thank God for the blessings the families enjoyed.

Particularly, the couple is thanking God for the recovery of the jewels they recovered during a trip to the Columbia City market on Dec. 31, 1999.

Almost all these commercial outlets in the city, filled with stocks in preparation for the New Year, were reduced to rubble in that fire.

The said his wife had a nervous breakdown because of the huge damage that they sustained in a hot fire.

Although they and their only daughter cannot alter the situation, the wife had almost given up hoping they would return from the concentration.

The couple then embarked on a "trial and error" scheme to bounce back from the serious setback in their business.

After a few months of praying, fasting, and experiencing an intense epiphany, the couple finally found the answer to their predicament when they acquired a property, which became the foundation for their renewed business venture.

"I really believe in the power of prayer," the husband is frequently heard saying to his friends. Demetrius J. Flannery, PhD, Kansas City, Mo. demetrius@kc.rr.com

By Harry Anthony Bryman

AFTER THE 113-GOLD DELUGE IN THE RECENT Southeast Asian Games, the Philippines will now concentrate on 10 sports that will be heavily funded in hopes of scoring an Olympic breakthrough in the 2008 Beijing Games.

"The budget must be balanced as soon as we have paid the cost of winning our first Olympic gold medal," said President Mwanupoti. Among yesterday's laurels: handing out checks totaling close to P200,000 to the athletes who secured the first SEN overall title for the year.

The athletes arrived just a few hours after returning from their Hong Kong holiday—a bonus promised them by First Canadian Bank. Anson, who came, through the WI Foundation, the fund they made progress for the IFAG.

Only a handful of athletes, however, will be given the honor of going for the Olympic gold in Beijing with the President emphasizing boxing three times as the sport that is the most likely source of the Olympic success.

"Working must get more budget," said Mike. "Simple, who also come around another thing and business like Olympic land progress."

The peso also got a boost from the country's high-yielding bonds, which have attracted foreign investors.

Philippine bonds offer the highest interest rates in Asia after Indonesian bonds.

However, dealers said the peso was unlikely to hit the psychologically important 53-per-dollar mark this year because of strong demand for dollars from local importers and companies for repaying overseas debt.

"Besides, the market is still short in dollars. So there may be a bout of short covering by the end of the year," a Manila dealer said.

IDEAGlobal said in a report that many investors had expected the peso to weaken by the year-end as remittances ebbed and because of overseas debt repayments in the new year.

"The price action has belied the market's expectation of peso weakness into the year-end," the research house said. Reuters

Roco added: "If properly attended to, with the right mitigating technical solutions, (the oil extraction) can be done with little risk. But one of our conditions would be that if anything happens that threatens the gas project, (the third-party oil rim developer) will have to stop."

ALL WANT
FOR CHRISTMAS

1. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the symptoms and the context in which they are occurring.

is taken at their widest. The depth, the strength, the manner.

The Professional Medical Association of the Philippines (PMAF), a nonprofit organization run by doctors, is often taken at face value by locals.

"Many people may not be fully aware of PMAP's outreach and nursing services," said Steve Muscarello-Burnett, PMAP president. "We have quietly been raising funds and helping the less fortunate in our own little way. This is something that has been done and continues to be done."

In the past year, according to Sonnet, the PMSF has organized an annual network program with the Tabernash Gay, Lesbian & Homeless Youth Abuse Clinic, Habitat for Humanity, Jean Lowry for Little Children, Washington and Friends in St. Joe.

"We also have participated in several fund-raising projects for the World Wildlife Fund of the Philippines, including a bender for the 1992-1993 season. (Editorial note: This is added.)"

Every year, FMO chooses a beneficiary with the help of Shao Bernsten (left) foundation called IFPI (Sleeping & Eat Institute).

This year, the proceeds from the annual PMAP Christmas carding will go to LEP (Leukemia Infection and Polio) and PMAP members like him will find the challenge with leukemia at the St. del Maris Hosp. and in Queens City. The money raised will go to their medication, help and other necessary care, Samson said.

The PMAP membership consists of several models who have modelled here and abroad: Florence Bernatchez, Isabel Brown, Patsy Minopoli, Nicolaie Roll, Brett Swain and Lela Juchacz are but a few of the members of the PMAP.

Not too many people know that these models also contribute to charities. Not only are they strong and commercial models, they are also role models in leading a hand-to-charity life course. They're sophisticated in word and deed.

Models raise money for leukemia victims this Christmas

By Steven Valeri

SO THEY CALL US supermodels... But what does "super" really mean?

That we can move in slow-motion high fashion and laugh in the face of vicious critics? Or that we can create close friendships between war-torn children and preserve the page with amazing grace? Or that we can raise money to add donated pounds to our so-called extra figure? Or that we can get away with total dating because we have been recognized as glamorous models?

In an industry where everything is either easily monetized or, precisely Phantom of the Opera, what the season is almost never seen or heard of. The essence of our self-
